TAKE ACTION TOOLKIT
Making the Most of Your Professional Licenses and Certifications

NATIONAL MILITARY FAMILY ASSOCIATION

For Military Spouses
Hey Military Spouse,

We know that frequent PCS moves across state lines make it hard for you to keep your professional and occupational licenses and certifications current. The process is a constant cycle of time-consuming tasks and pocket-emptying fees just to continue working in your career field.

You want to work. We want to help.

Are you ready to take action and make the process work for you? This toolkit has you covered with some key steps and resources to help you become your best advocate and take charge of your professional career.

Military spouses earn 26.8% less in income than their non-military counterparts, which adds up to $12,374 per year in lost wages.
Military Spouse Professionals At-a-Glance

Whether you’re getting licensed for the first time, or transferring your credentials for the 10th time, it isn’t always smooth sailing for military spouse professionals. Have you experienced any of these stages before?

The Unemployed or Underemployed Spouse
They are licensed or certified in a particular occupation but have not been able to find a job using their credentials or are working in a job not directly using their credentials.

First Time License or Certification Spouse
This spouse has never been licensed in their profession and is going through the application process to obtain credentials for the first time.

The PCS Transfer Spouse
They have been credentialed in their field, possibly worked in their field for multiple years, and now are moving due to their military member’s PCS orders. They may or may not have been through the process of transferring their credentials, but they know they can’t guarantee the process will be smooth sailing for yet another PCS.

Why Relicensing is a Problem for Military Spouses

Problem One: The Process is Time-Consuming

I’ve had to deal with discrimination in hiring practices and not being able to maintain employment due to my spouse’s deployments, increased demand at work, and limited child care options.

Survey participants are NMFA Spouse Scholarship Recipients who used funding towards professional license and certification fees

26% of NMFA Scholarship Recipients said their new state did NOT provide resources or information to help them renew or transfer their license or certification.
We have moved seven times and it has been nearly impossible to even attempt recertification. Sadly, I had to walk away from teaching due to this.

Interstate Compacts Provide Relief

Occupational interstate compacts allow a military spouse with an occupational license or certification in one compact state to practice in another participating state through “privilege to practice” policies. States voluntarily sign onto each compact to allow spouses to take advantage of the state-to-state reciprocity.

These compacts can help alleviate some of the stress and loss of time it takes to start working in your career field after a PCS move.

Current Occupational Interstate Compacts

- Physical Therapy Licensure Compact
- Enhanced Nursing Licensure Compact
- Interstate Compact for EMS
- Interstate Medical Licensure Compact
- Interjurisdictional Compact for Psychology
- Advance Practice RN Compact
- Audiology & Speech Language Pathology Compact

Stay on Top of the Latest Legislation in Your State

Defense-State Liaison Office (DSLO) DSLO’s key issue status tracker is a great resource provided by Military OneSource that addresses advances made on key issues in each state.

Visit StatePolicy.MilitaryOneSource.mil to view the key issues and find your DSLO State representative.
Dear Representative/Senator Smith,

I’m writing to request your vote in favor of [state action]. My name is [your name], and I am a military spouse and a [your occupation].

As you consider this state action, I believe it’s important to let you know how passing [state action] would positively impact my life and career as well as that of other military spouses who also work in [your occupation].

In closing, I want to thank you for your support of the military community and [the local community where you’re stationed].

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Tip: You don’t have to stop with your state legislator, reach out to your state’s licensing board and encourage them to create military-specific pages on their websites.

Share Your Story and Create Impact

Once you’ve identified your regional Defense-State Liaison Office representative, send them an email or letter telling them the challenges you’ve faced trying to continue your career after moving to their state, and suggest recommendations that might make the process easier for future military spouses moving there.

You can make that letter do extra work if you send it to your state legislator, too. Visit OpenStates.org/Find_Your_Legislator/

Need some guidance for what your letter should say? We’ve created two sample letters to guide you.

Dear Representative/Senator Smith,

I’m writing to inform you about an issue I’ve faced as a new military spouse in your state. My name is (your name), and I am a military spouse and a (your occupation). I believe it’s important to let you know how much it would mean to me and my military family for you to help people like me, who the military moves from state to state, maintain my career. Transient, working professionals, like me need to be able to more easily access reciprocity with occupational licenses and certifications so we can continue to work and support our families.

In closing, I want to thank you for your support of the military community and (the local community where you’re stationed).

Sincerely,

We know it’s costly to keep your credentials up-to-date, especially when moving with your service member every 2-3 years. Fortunately, there’s some financial relief available for families who have emptied their pockets to keep a military spouse’s professional license.

Reimbursements
A pilot program—slated to continue through 2024—will reimburse service members up to $1,000 for re-licensing expenses incurred by their spouse due to PCS orders to a new state. You may qualify for reimbursement through your service branch. Visit MilitaryFamily.org/Licensing-Certification-Resources to learn more about each branch’s reimbursement policy.

Scholarships
The National Military Family Association offers scholarships for military spouses seeking additional funding for obtaining and renewing professional credentials. Our scholarships are not limited to four-year degrees—they can be used for licensing fees, testing costs, renewal fees, supervision hours, and more.

Apply for an NMFA Scholarship and view our other partner offers at MilitaryFamily.org

MyCAA

My Career Advancement Account Scholarship Program is a workforce development program that provides financial assistance for degrees, licenses, and certifications to help pursue an occupation or career field.

The GI Bill

Some license and certification fees can be covered by the G.I. Bill and Post-9/11 G.I. Bill, which have helped qualifying Veterans and their family members get money to cover all or some of the costs for school or training.

Military Relief Societies:

- Air Force Aid Society
- Army Emergency Relief
- Coast Guard Mutual Assistance
- Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society

Local Resources

Additional funding opportunities may be available locally – through military installation family community centers, spouse groups, or the Chamber of Commerce.
Your experience as a military spouse professional can help shape the future for those who follow in your footsteps. Not only can you be your own best advocate today, your story will inspire others and change the game for spouses like you.
